FonVantage: Doing VoIP Right

Voice over Internet Protocol, also known as VoIP, is revolutionizing the communication industry; rolling into every home and business across the world. Unlike traditional phone service which routes calls over wires buried in the ground, VoIP transmits calls over Broadband Internet connections. Calls are made and received as they would be with traditional phones. However, VoIP service can also be used when traveling, allowing calls to be made from anywhere in the world.

FonVantage has taken VoIP technology one step further to ensure the best call quality available. Other VoIP providers transfer calls using the public Internet where they encounter several stops en route from origination of the call to the receiving party; subject to interference and delays. FonVantage built a privately managed network to transfer calls with the clearest sound, zero delay, consistent connections, and the most seamless phone experience. This ensures calls have the quality and clarity of current telephone service, but for a lot less money. FonVantage has revolutionized residential VoIP service, providing customers everywhere with low cost, high quality communication solutions.

Your Broadband Internet connection can now do much more than make surfing the web a lightning fast experience. With FonVantage, your telephone instantly becomes a web device loaded with easy-to-use features that suit your lifestyle.
